Description :

Prsentation de l'diteurA poignant and brilliant sequel to Dandelion Wine from the author of Fahrenheit 451In Green Town Illinois, Douglas Spaulding is in the midst of a small civil war with the old pitted against the young in this, the second book in Bradburys semi-fictionalised account of his childhood. As the school boards figure of authority Mr Calvin C. Quartermain attempts to outwit the boys at every turn, their antics increase and become ever more daring and mischevius. Once the shadow of winter draws across Green Town, the boys quickly realise that their enemy is not so much the senior members of their own community, but rather time itself which is ever ebbing away, just beyond the reach of their most daring trick yet: a bold attempt to sabotage the towns clock.Revue de presse[B]eautiful imagery and well-crafted prose. (Chicago Sun-Times)An intriguing coda to one of Bradburys classics. (Kirkus s)Creepier than [Dandelion Wine] but retains the elegiac tone and lovely descriptions of 1920s boyhood. (Library Journal)A touching meditation on memories, aging, and the endless cycle of birth and death. (Booklist)Poignant, wise...Bradburys mature but fresh return to his beloved early writing conveys a depth of feeling. (Publishers Weekly)Bradbury remains a master of inspired storytelling . . . The long-awaited, rewarding conclusion to an American classic.
